"The first time I ever heard of such a ne was through a letter I received from a friend in St. Louis a few days ago, who asked my opinion of the property. He said he was about to buy 40,000 shares of the stock at $1 a share and asked me if it was a safe in stare and asked he if it was a safe investment. Not knowing anything of the mine I informed him so, but instructed him to keep his money until I could find out more about it. The Jay Gould company's claims extend 4,500 feet and embrace every on the outer edges there is just barely enough quartz to let us hold the ground. To me this Superior mine looks like a fraud, and I would not advise any one to put his money into it before knowing some-thing of the property. I shall make it my business to investigate this matter, as it is a great injury to Montana to foster some of the scape-goat transactions that have been foisted on eastern people in the past."

The South Montana, another alleged scheme in which London capitalists have largely invested, is reported to have made a strike of some value. The manager of this concern, which is said to join the famous Drum Lummon, (the number of miles from the shaft not stated) was very reticent about his information when ap proached by a reporter. He said it was well known in London some time ago that a rich strike had been made, but for reasons or his own the particulars he would not di-vulge. The South Montana may prove to

Prof. J. E. Clayton returned Friday from a tour of inspection of the Montana Mining district, about six miles from Gardner, in Park county. The district lies between Bear creek and Crevice creek. To an Independent reporter Prof. Clayton described the comparatively unknown country as follows:

"The summit of the ridge in which the mines are situated is 2,800 feet higher than the river at Gardner. The river at that point runs to the east and west and then goes northwest to a point opposite, about zone of schist and quartz interlamanated, seams as a rule are not continuous any great distance, but other streaks or seams of ore set in, forming a kind of network of seams and veins within the belt of schis These quartz seams carrying ore are from a few inches to eight or ten feet wide in places. This impregnated zone belongs to the class such as the Homestake and other mines in the Black Hills, and in some cases the whole belt would pay to work as a low grade proposition, but the high grade ores are confined to seams, lenticular masses and sulphurated zones or bands of schist. In many places these schists are as rich or richer than the quartz scams. The sulphurets are in the most an arsenical pyrite, similar in character to t found in the great mineralized zone Douglas Island, Alaska. The surface soil from four to five feet deep along the outcrop and down the hillside of the zone, all prospects well in free gold, and would pay well to sluice off if water could be got on to it.

The developments are confined entirely The developments are confined entirely to surface cuts and prospect holes for about 1500 feet in length. The quantity of workable material is large judging from the surface representation, but just how large cannot be told until more extensive developments can be made. We brought in samples of the first-class ore which prospects very rich in free gold, which was crushed and washed at Hand's assay office. Assays will be made in a few days. The district is not an entirely new one; it has been discovered for seventeen or eighteen years, but covered for seventeen or eighteen years, but no one has been able to teil how to work it. They were looking for a lead when the whole belt itself is a mineralized zone whole belt itself is a mineralized zone of country rock. I regard it as a very promising district on the whole. The tenure of gold is very irregular, more or less bunchy, but withal a very valuable property. The vein can be traced for 4,000 feet. The intention is to organize a small company to develop the property. Mr. Gerley, of this city, is a third owner in the principal claim and Messrs. Ellis & Gillis. The latter lives at the mine. The preperty is bonded to

A gentleman from Philipsburg states that old man Freeman, who has prospected the hills of Montana for the last twenty years, without ever striking annything, h s at last struck it rich near Stump Town, a few hundred yards north of the Hope. Single-handed and alone the old fellow drove a tunnel on his claim 200 feet, after which his money gave out. By some agreement he gave Col. Hawkins, the alleged temperance lecturer, a lease on the mine, who, after driving the tunnel five feet further, struck a very good looking body of ore, which shows a four-foot breast and has been cut into about five test. It is the original owner, has secured a controlling interest in the stock now and also has a lease. The Buckeye has a well appointed hoisting plant, is well-timbered and in good shape generally. This property is expected to be favorably heard from in the near future, as it has every indication of running on to the Bi-Metallic vein, it being in a direct line and only a few hundred feet from the east line of the silver bonanza and ore taken from it being identical in character but lower grade.

Judge Blake began a somewhat lengthy amined and sworn.

Judge Blake began a somewhat lengthy and perspicuous charge as follows: I will appoint J. P. Woolman foreman of the grand jury. Gentlemen of the Grand Jury: The oath which you have just taken expresses clearly and concisely the motives by which you must be governed in making your investigations, the means by which you must arrive at judicial results, and also the character of testimony you should receive. You have been duly impaneled and sworn, and it is my duty to give you such instructions as I may deem proper concerning your inquiries. Your jurisdiction embraces all offenses committed against the territory of Montana within the boundaries of the county of Lewis and Clarke. There are, however, certain offenses committed partly in one county and partly in another, and if in your investigations any offense of that nature has been committed in the county of Lewis and Clarke, that also would be within your jurisdiction. If, however, it should transpire that the investigation has already commenced in another county, or another tribunal has already acquired jurisdiction, then it would not be proper for you to proceed any further. Then there are offenses which may be committed even outside the territory and consummated within the county of Lewis and Clarke, over which you would also have jurisdiction; there are also offenses which may be committed on a stream or river which may be punishable in any country through which the stream within which prosecutions for certain offenses should be commenced. The sections of the compiled statutes prescribing the manner in which grand juries should perform their duties, and the character of the evidence which should be received by them were then commented upon, and all those laws which expressly provide that the attention of grand juries shall be called to their provisions were read. After a lengthy and lucid review of the statutes which it is made the duty of the court to bring to the notice of the grand jury, the charge concluded as follows: It is a just cause of congratulation to this country that you will not be called upon at this term to investigate any cases of murder committed within the past six months, or since the adjournment of the last term of this court; and when we consider the marveious growth of the population of this county during that time, it is something that the commenced. The sections of the wholesome tone that pervades it is very acceptable after the vast amount of coarseness that has been staged here in the last six months. Mr. Russell is supported by an excellent company, of whom Miss Merri Osburn as Scollops, the terror, and Miss Florence Field as Dolly Faye are perhaps the best. The Jasper Sterrett of Mr. Douglas was the conventional stage villain, as the Roderick Faye of Mr. Fitzpatrick was cut after the usual pattern of trustful manufacturers and loving papas of pretty daughters. The acting of little Ada Terry and Gerald Crisp was very taking.

"Bewitched," also written by Mr. Kidder expressly for Mr. Russell, is the piay for this evening, and to-morrow afternoon "A Poor Relation" will be played again, closing the engagement.

I have enjoyed for years an acquaintance with many of your fellow-citizens; but I am a stranger to the cases upon your docket, and think that I can approach their trial with that condition of mind which pertains to an impartial juror. The thieves got away with $170 in money and a certificate of de posit on the First National bank of Helena for $3,460, payment on which has been stopped. The robbery took place Saturday night, probably about midnight. Mr. Baxter said he retired about 10:30 o'clock in the same apartment with his wife, who was sick, and as he had been up the night before giving her medicine he was very sleepy and soon drowsed off. He slept soundly until 6 o'clock Sunday morning. About 7 o'clock he went to look for Lis wallet, which he placed under his pillow before retiring, but could not find it. One hundred years have passed since the government which our forefathers established was formally organized by the inauguration of its first president, George Washigton.

The centennial of this illustrious event in our history has, by an act of the congress of the United States, been declared a general holiday to the end that the people of our whole country may join in commemorative exercise appropriate to the day.

Now, therefore, I, Benjamin F. White, governor of the territory of Montana, in honor of so important an epoch in our country.

With men who have either a reputation to sustain and mean to sustain it, or have one to make and mean to make it, the pop ular New York Life Insurance company will make the most liberal arrangements consistent with a safe and rational conduct of business. Persons engaged regularly in other occupations, who may yet have a portion of time at their disposal, which they desire to utilize, are also invited to respond to this notice.

EDW'D. D. SNIFFEN,

To Straighten Sixth Avenue, At the next meeting of the city council Alderman Loeb will bring up the matter of straightening Sixth avenue, near Davis street. By condemning a triangular piece of ground on one side of the street the avenue could be straightened so as to add a great deal to its attractiveners. It is understood that the property holders on the avenue favor the plan.

W. L. Colville (Dick Swiveler) is visiting Helena in the interests of the new Baker shot gun. M. H. Bryan will handle their guns hereafter in Helena.

There will be a meeting of the Lewis and Clarke county democratic committee at the office of A. J. Davidson, on lower Main street, on Wednesday evening, April 24, at 7:30 o'clock. Members of the committee are requested to attend.
